

Catalogue of Compositions

Horst Weber's catalogue of 1971<sup>1</sup> and a dissertation by Lawrence A. Oncley<sup>2</sup> were the first systematic surveys of Zemlinsky's oeuvre, followed in 1978 by Rudolph Stefan's comprehensive list of published items.<sup>3</sup> Detailed examination of the Zemlinsky Collection at The Library of Congress was carried out by Wayne Shirley, who in 1980 drew up a Revised List<sup>4</sup> of manuscript holdings, correcting many earlier errors of dating and titling. Work on the Collection continued until 1993, when several manuscript folders were reorganized, their material regrouped and a new, more precise Guide was issued.<sup>5</sup> Since then, a few fragments have been reunited, and some items presumed lost have been salvaged – notably the finale of the D minor symphony and the orchestral song Erdeinsamkeit.

The chronological section of this catalogue includes incomplete or fragmentary items.<sup>6</sup> Manuscript locations are given where known, whereby 'LoC' numbers refer to the Guide mentioned above; publication details are included where applicable; the date and place of first performance are included where ascertainable. Works are listed according to their date of completion: where this is uncertain, the chronology inevitably remains conjectural.

The systematic section of the catalogue includes unpublished works, but omits incomplete and fragmentary items.

With regard to opus numbers Rudolph Stefan has written:<sup>7</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Horst Weber, 'Zemlinsky in Wien 1871–1911', Archiv für Musikwissenschaft, xxxviii (1971), 77–90. Weber's later work lists – in his book Alexander Zemlinsky, Österreichische Komponisten des XX. Jahrhunderts, xxiii, Vienna, 1977 and in the 1980 edition of The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians, xx, 666 – are less comprehensive.

It appears that Zemlinsky originally [...] determined the opus numbers for his works according to their date of publication [...] Hence their numerical sequence does indeed mirror their chronology, albeit incompletely. This presumably explains why the prize-winning opera Sarema was allotted no opus number; it was in fact printed at a juncture (1899) when any available opus number would have implied a false sequence [...] For this reason I would like to assume [...] that the opera Der Traumgörge can be counted as op. 11, the musical comedy Kleider machen Leute (first version) as op. 12 and the opera Der Kreidekreis as op. 21. By op. 19 [...] Zemlinsky had changed his system. From now on he numbered [only] those works which he intended to publish [...] Hence one can explain the numbering of the Symphonische Gesänge as op. 20, of the Six Songs as op. 22. And the opera [Der] König Kandaules was probably intended as op. 26.

Stefan's suggestions are implemented in the catalogue in the form of bracketed opus numbers.

The Zemlinsky Collection at The Library of Congress includes six manuscripts of doubtful authenticity or unknown authorship:

1. Schlaf mein Püppchen (LoC 14/9), duet for soprano, baritone and piano (possibly by Schoenberg but not in his hand)
2. Three Fugues for piano (dated 1911–12, LoC 16/2)
3. Adagio of a Symphony in E♭ (LoC 26/4)
4. ‘Sehr langsam und zart’, movement in A major for string orchestra (LoC 26/5)
5. Ich fühle deinen Odem, for voice and piano (LoC 26/6)
6. Eierpunsch, birthday march by ‘Gutberg und Jakomann’ (LoC 28/3).

A setting of Paul Heyse’s Daß doch gemalt (LoC 28/11), included in several earlier work lists, is in fact by Hugo Wolf (Italienisches Liederbuch): Zemlinsky’s manuscript is a transposition of the song into E major.

»Piano sonata [no. 2] in C minor. Comp. November 1890. MS: Bucharest<sup>12</sup>

<sup>11</sup> Only seven songs have survived, as numbered here. The MS also includes a fragment of a further (unidentified) song in E major.

<sup>12</sup> Items marked » and « are found in a portfolio of compositions (40 pp.) evidently found amongst the posthumous papers of Theodor Fuchs (1873–1953). The manuscripts and their contents are described in Mircea Voicana, ‘Zemlinsky: un camarade viennois de Georges Enesco’, Revue roumaine d’histoire de l’art, V, 1968, 155–62. Although the portfolio was housed temporarily in the Romanian State Library, Bucharest, its present location is unknown.

Three (four) piano pieces: [1) Intermezzo in B♭ major (fragment); 2) Schnell mit großem Schwung in A major; 3) Intermezzo in C♯ minor<sup>13</sup>; 4) Fantasie in D major.<sup>14</sup> Comp. begun 16 April 1891. LoC 1/7

Four Miniatures for piano: 1) D major; 2) B minor; 3) A minor; 4) C minor.<sup>15</sup> Comp. ?1891. Ded. Otto Schiele. LoC 1/8

Two (six) piano pieces:<sup>16</sup> [1) in A♭ major, fragment]; 2) 1. Abend in G major; 3) Pompeji (12. Abend) in F♯ minor; [4) Der Polichinell, fragment]. Comp. ?1891. LoC 1/9 and 1/9a

[Zigeunerliebe, Rhapsodie in B♭ major for piano, fragment.<sup>17</sup> LoC 1/9]

»[Das liebliche Vergißmeinnicht (poet unidentified) for voice and piano. Comp. 1891, fragment, not authenticated. MS: Bucharest]«

[Symphony (no. 1<sup>18</sup>) in E minor, movts. 2 and 3 only. Orchestration begun 25 April 1891; compl. 26 May 1891. Incomplete. LoC 1/10]

»Drei leichte Stücke for piano. Comp. 1891. MS: Bucharest«

Ländliche Tänze op. 1, for piano. Comp. ?1891. Publ. Breitkopf und Härtel, Leipzig, 1892<sup>19</sup>

<sup>16</sup> Planned as a set of six pieces, of which only four were completed. The only extant, complete pieces are listed in the Systematic Catalogue as ‘Two piano pieces (1891)’.

<sup>18</sup> It was the wish of Louise Zemlinsky that the symphonies be referred to not by number but by key. The MS catalogued as third movement is an Allegretto in D major and has the character of a finale, i.e. title page and musical content have probably been confused with another, unidentified work.

Der Morgenstern (Vincenz Zusner) for voice and piano. Comp. ?June 1892. LoC 3/1.<sup>20</sup> Publ. Ricordi, Munich, 1995

Frühlingslied (Heinrich Heine) for voice and piano. Comp. 30 July 1892. LoC 1/20. Publ. Ricordi, Munich, 1995

Two (five) songs to texts by Paul Heyse: [1) Mädchenlied, incomplete; 2) unidentified, comp. 4–5 January 1893, incomplete]; 3) Auf die Nacht; 4) Im Lenz,<sup>22</sup> comp. 1 November 1892 [5) Trutzliedchen, incomplete]. LoC 1/22. Nos. 2 and 3 publ. Ricordi, Munich, 1995

<sup>19</sup> Dances no. 8 and 9 were also published by Breitkopf & Härtel in an undated album: Salonmusik. N[eue] F[olge]. Ausgewählte Klavierwerke neuerer Komponisten.

[String quintet in D minor.<sup>28</sup> Comp. 6 November 1894.<sup>29</sup> MS incomplete LoC 3/14. 1st movement publ. Ricordi, Munich, 1994]

Suite for orchestra: Legende (A minor); Reigen (A major); Humoreske (F major). Comp. ?1895. LoC 4/1-2. 1st perf. 18 March 1895, Vienna

<sup>27</sup> LoC 26/19 (Der Mönch zu Pisa) contains a concluding fragment in E♭ major for cello and piano, dated '7.1.1894' and marked 'zum Übertragen' (to be transferred). This could be a passage from the sonata.

<sup>28</sup> Zemlinsky's fair copy of this work is lost. The extant MS includes the entire first movement and sketches for three further movements: Adagio (A♭ major, 62 bars), Scherzando (C major, 9 bars) and Finale (D major, 27 bars).

<sup>29</sup> Completion date of the first movement, of which the opening is marked 'am 17.10.' Sketches for three succeeding movements are undated.

<sup>35</sup> A revised and abbreviated version of no. 4 of the Four Miniatures (c1891).

<sup>37</sup> An opera about Desiderius, last king of the Lombards. The most substantial fragment extends to several pages and opens with the words, ‘Aufs Haupt geschlagen ist Desider. Es siegt der Langobarden Heer.’ The chief character of the opera is ‘Almosfrede’. A further fragment, ‘Einzug der Jagdgesellschaft’, is written on the same folio as the Hochzeitsgesang, composed in April 1896; another (LoC 6/3), headed ‘1. Scene’, is preserved on the same folio as the song Im Lenz (op. 2/II no. 4) and can hence be approximately dated to July 1896.

<sup>39</sup> These two song fragments share the same musical material as Das verlassene Mädchen, op. 2/II no. 6. The MS of Ich schreite heim is written on the reverse side of a sketch for op. 2/I no. 5.

Songs op. 5 for voice and piano. <sup>51</sup> According to a letter to Edition Wilhelm Hansen dated 12.1.1898 Zemlinsky had already delivered the MSS of these songs but still wished to revise op. 8 no. 3.

<sup>52</sup> Copies of these songs in an unidentified hand (with some autograph markings) are preserved in the Moldenhauer Archive, Houghton Library, Harvard University.

<sup>53</sup> Copyist's score with MS revisions by Zemlinsky and further alterations by Mahler; also original performing materials. A vocal score used by Margarethe Michalek, who understudied Selma Kurz in the original Vienna production, is preserved in the British Library. It includes copious hand-written alterations.

<sup>54</sup> The first movement of a projected two- or three-movement work, the 167 bars of this composition are a setting of vv. 1 and 2 of Dehmel's 5-verse poem. Zemlinsky's choice of G♭ major suggests a possible link with the E♭ minor of the preceding composition.

<sup>55</sup> Fridl was scheduled for performance at the Tonkünstlerverein on 1.3.1900 but cancelled due to the indisposition of one of the performers. The libretto, preserved in the Zemlinsky Collection (LoC 9/5a), includes a few musical sketches and a list of singers required.

<sup>57</sup> On a loose leaf (LoC 26/31) Zemlinsky noted the further intended dedications for these songs: 1) Anna Norden; 3) to myself; 4) [Louis] Treumann; 5) Mela[nie] Guttmann; 6) Schoenberg.

<sup>58</sup> As no. 5 was incorporated in the revised version of Es war einmal..., it must have been composed before 1900.

<sup>60</sup> cf. Web-Br 20, letter to Schoenberg postmarked 18.12.1901; this was evidently the only ‘Ueberbrettl’ song of Zemlinsky’s to be performed at Wolzogen’s Buntes Theater in Berlin.

<sup>62</sup> Whether Zemlinsky ever completed the short score of Act III is unclear; cf. letter from Hofmannsthal to Universal Edition, Vienna, dated 26 January 1926: ‘...Zemlinsky composed either the whole ballet or at least part of it.’

<sup>77</sup> Full title: Der chinesische Hund, oder der englische Apfelstrudel | vulgär der Gmundener Regenwurm | demselben gewidmet in seiner 9. Lebenswoche | Schlummerlied zur Beruhigung der Blähungen (The Chinese dog or the English apple strudel, commonly called the Gmunden worm. Dedicated to the same in her 9th week. Lullaby to soothe winds).

<sup>79</sup> Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 5 of the cycle of six. The two further songs were added in 1913.

<sup>80</sup> No.1 first publ. as music supplement to NMZ, 32 Jg. 1911, Heft 18; no. 3 publ. as music supplement to Musikblätter des Anbruch, 2. Jg. 1920, Heft 13; nos. 3 and 5 also publ. in Das moderne Lied. Eine Sammlung von 50 Gesängen für mittlere Stimme, ed. J.V. v. Wöss, Universal Edition, Vienna, 1914.

<sup>81</sup> The MS, headed ‘1. Szene’, extends to 17 pages and includes parts for ‘Der Ritter,’ ‘Der Mönch’ and ‘Der Diener’; it breaks off after a chorus of monks intoning the ‘Kyrie eleison’. With the putative title, which is mentioned in an undated letter to Hertzka (UE), Zemlinsky may, according to Clayton, have been referring to Karl von Levetzow’s Der Meister von Prag, a libretto also considered by Richard Strauss (ACI, 248).

Ricordi, Munich, 1995

<sup>83</sup> In Zemlinsky's original MS the Cymbeline music is numbered 'op. 14': this number was later allocated to Psalm XXIII.

<sup>86</sup> Further source material, evidently used for performances in Vienna under Webern's supervision on 19 and 20 November 1922, are hand-written copies of nos. 1 and 2 (LoC 16/13 and 12/1) and of nos. 1, 3 and 4 (private collection).

—Waltz-Intermezzo from Kleider machen Leute. Publ. Universal Edition, 1922. First perf. 22 October 1929, Vienna

<sup>87</sup> Zemlinsky composed the music for a ‘scenic prologue’, of which the autograph is lost (cf. Web-Br 176, 21.5.1917, 170).

<sup>90</sup> Strictly speaking, this is a transcription, for the printed text follows the vocal score by Jalowetz (Allegro, p. 116–119) note for note. Presumably the publication was authorized by Zemlinsky.

<sup>91</sup> In the orchestral score of the six songs, published in 1923, the sequence of nos. 4 and 5 in the piano version of 1914 is reversed.

Lyrische Symphonie op. 18 in seven songs after Rabindranath Tagore [trans. Hans Effenberger] for soprano and baritone soli and large orchestra. Comp. 2 April 1922–29 August 1923. Universal Edition, Vienna, 1929. 1st perf. 8 April 1935, Brno

<sup>92</sup> The MS comprises four sketches and an unfinished particell for an '1. Scene', Presto 6/8; the roles are: Karl (bass) and Leonie (soprano). Ernst Hilmar places the work chronologically between Cymbeline and Eine florentinische Tragödie, i.e. c1915 (cf. Hilmar, 'Text und Musik in einem Opernfragment Zemlinskys', AeSU, 280–283). Judging by the musical style, however, there can be little doubt that the fragment dates from a later period.

<sup>94</sup> In the MS the quartet is not numbered. The published version is listed in the Systematic Catalogue as 'Two movements for string quartet'.

Der Kreidekreis (op. 21), opera in three acts (seven scenes). Libretto by Zemlinsky after Klabund. Comp. 3 July 1930–8 October 1932. LoC 21/1-2, 22/1 and 23/1-2. Ded.: Louise Zemlinsky. Libretto publ. Phaidon Verlag, Vienna, 1933. Vocal score publ. Universal Edition, Vienna, 1933. 1st perf. 14 October 1933, Zurich Stadttheater
